Launching and Flourishing in a Career in Mental Health Research

Career Development Institute for Psychiatry

March 25–March 29, 2023
University of Pittsburgh – Pittsburgh, PA

The Research Career Development Institute for Psychiatry (CDI) is a multi-faceted longitudinal training experience for early-stage psychiatrists, clinical psychologists, and neuroscientists interested in successful research careers in academic psychiatry. The 24-month program is designed for individuals at the critical transition point between the completion of research training and the establishment of independence. It consists of:

- 4-day workshop, comprised of interactive panel sessions, negotiation training, a quantitative seminar, a mock grant review, and one-on-one and peer mentoring
- 2 years of long-distance mentoring and interactive webinars
- A supportive community of alumni and faculty

For more information or to apply, visit cdi.pitt.edu.
Application Deadline: December 18th, 2022

Applicants to the program should:
- Have an MD and/or PhD degree
- Be in their final year of residency, an advanced postdoctoral position, or a junior faculty position (for less than two years)
- Must be a U.S. citizen or permanent resident

Applicants from under-represented groups are encouraged to apply. Acceptance to the program will be determined on a competitive basis.

The Research Career Development Institute for Psychiatry is sponsored in part by a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health (R25MH090947), by the Department of Psychiatry of the University of Pittsburgh, and by the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences of Stanford University.
